Henning Larsen Architects:

A Nordic Perspective on Creating Livable Cities

Open to the Public. No Cost, Seating is Limited. Registration Required.

Architecture should not only reference itself, but should give back to the context that it is a part of; not just its immediate surroundings and users, but also the communities that it engages with. The result is a contribution to creating social, sustainable, and livable cities. This philosophy is one of the key drivers in the works of the Scandinavian architectural practice, Henning Larsen.

In this presentation, Louis Becker, Design Director and Principal Partner at Henning Larsen Architects, will emphasize the importance of shared spaces and how architecture must address and foster human interaction in order to make them what they are envisioned to be. Featuring a demonstration of the distinct design methodology of Henning Larsen and several case studies, Becker aims to exhibit iconic landmarks, universities, and innovative work spaces as important building blocks of the built, urban environment.

Free and open to the public, but seating is limited and registration is required. Reserve tickets HERE.

Presented by the Denver Architectural Foundation with Design Council of the Denver Art Museum and CU Denver College of Architecture and Planning.

The Colorado International Invitational Poster Exhibition and Avenir Museum of Design & Merchandising

Design Council Member Event. No Cost, Registration Required.

Join Design Council of the Denver Art Museum for a guided walking tour of the biennial Colorado International Invitational Poster Exhibition at Colorado State University. John Gravdahl, Professor and Co-Director of CIPE, will take us on what remains the only international poster exhibition of its kind in the United States. The first CIPE was organized in 1979 by the Department of Art and Art History at CSU with the purpose of bringing out-standing examples of international poster design to an American audience.

After lunch we will visit the Avenir Museum of Design and Merchandising home to CSU's historic costume and textiles collection. Doreen Beard, Director of Operations and Engagement, will acquaint us with the Avenir, before taking us on a private tour of The Allure of the Moroccan Caftan. This colorful exhibition traces how history, geography, craftsmanship, national pride, and tradition have contributed to the caftan's contemporary allure. This an event not to be missed!

This special opportunity is free for Design Council members and one guest. Tour is limited to 30 attendees. Attendees are responsible for their own travel arrangements and lunch. Additional details regarding lunch and carpooling options are forthcoming. For questions or to register, contact Kati Woock at 720.913.0101 or kwoock@denverartmuseum.org.

This event is presented by Design Council of the Denver Art Museum.
